Mega-resort Tignes is opening its new pedestrianised ski village, Tignes 1800, this season, complete with Alpine architecture and traditional feel – a far cry from its big brother Tignes Val Claret. But while Tignes and Val d'Isère hog the spotlight, farther down the valley Sainte Foy has been quietly cementing its credentials as the place to go for superb powder and charming boutique accommodation. Première Neige is throwing open the doors of its luxury addition, La Marquise, for the first time. If you're looking for beautiful simplicity and no lift queues, but still want access to the terrain of the Espace Killy, Sainte Foy remains the best kept-secret of the Alps. Seven nights' full-board accommodation from £905pp (premiere-neige.com).
