ENGLISH ROSE

Rosewood Hotels & Resorts is quickly becoming one of the most respected luxury hotel groups in the world, and just last month, it launched a stunning new London property in the original Pearl Assurance Company headquarters in High Holborn. Having spent £85 million on renovations, the 1914 Edwardian Belle Époque building seamlessly blends English heritage with the contemporary sophistication of a Rosewood property. Offering 262 guest rooms and 44 suites, the hotel will feature 11 event spaces, including a ballroom. The Grade II-listed property features the original facade and the only grand courtyard arrival in the capital.
