

20 October 2016

Chemmy Alcott's five favourite resorts

We all have our own favourite places to go skiing. But what about for four-time Winter Olympian and Ski Club Ambassador Chemmy Alcott?

 Like 143  Tweet

Having skied and competed around the world for over 20 years, Chemmy has visited more resorts than most – but which ones have really stuck in her memory as being that little bit extra special? Narrowing down to five proved to be tough task but after much deliberation Chemmy came up with the following (in no particular order!).

Sainte Foy (France)

This hidden gem is nestled amongst big hitting resorts such as Tignes and Val d'Isere in the Tarentaise region – but it should not be missed. Yes there are only four lifts, but these open up a huge amount of fantastic skiing, especially the off piste in the Vallon du Clou over the back. 10km powder faces and lines through the trees lead you down through ancient farming villages that are a world away from the mega resorts further up the valley. I'm looking forward to returning in late January with some sporting legends for another week in this awesome resort.

Five Ski Club Freshtracks holidays are heading to Sainte Foy this season, including our Mountaincraft Course held just before Christmas.

